Hannah Jones has a multi-faceted litigation, investigations and counseling practice focused on the legal issues affecting today's employers. She represents clients in individual and class action litigations and administrative proceedings involving employee mobility and intellectual property issues (including non-compete agreements, trade secrets, employee raiding, invention assignment rights, and non-solicitation obligations), discrimination, wage and hour practices, and wrongful termination.

Hannah also works directly with clients to solve thorny pre-litigation counseling matters including managing internal investigations, risk management and compliance, negotiating and preparing employment-related agreements, conducting workplace trainings, and formulating corporate policies and manuals.

Hannah maintains an active pro bono practice with a focus on protecting economic and educational opportunities for women and girls through her work with the Center for Reproductive Rights and Equal Rights Advocates.

Prior to joining Coblentz, Hannah was an associate at Weil, Gotshal & Manges LLP in Silicon Valley. She also worked as in-house employment and compliance counsel for Applied Materials, Inc.

Hannah is an Association of Workplace Investigators Certificate Holder (AWI-CH). AWI is a professional association for those who conduct or manage workplace investigations. She is a board member of Legal Aid at Work, a nonprofit legal services organization that assists low-income, working families in California.

Hannah received her J.D. from the University of California, Davis, School of Law, where she received six Witkin Awards for Academic Excellence. While in law school, she served as a member of the UC Davis Law Review and was elected Order of the Coif. She earned her B.A., with honors, from Lewis and Clark College.
