Matt Stone assists property owners, developers, institutions, and investors with local land use and environmental compliance. He focuses on helping clients obtain governmental approvals to develop or utilize property by conducting due diligence and zoning analysis, and helps develop entitlement strategies to navigate the applicable development and environmental review processes.

Matt advises clients during all stages of the entitlement and environmental review processes from project conception to final approval. Within this work, he regularly interacts with consultants and project teams to design and revise projects, develop application materials, and find solutions to complex development requirements or environmental issues. He also assists clients with post-entitlement implementation phase, condition compliance, and construction-related matters.

Matt has experience with a wide variety of residential, commercial, and mixed-use projects throughout California, including sensitive coastal development and infill redevelopment. And he is familiar with the California Coastal Act, California Planning and Zoning Laws, California Environmental Quality Act, and other federal and state environmental laws.

Matt earned his J.D., cum laude, from Tulane University Law School in 2012. He earned his B.A. from Yale University in 2006.
