Sabrina Larson's practice focuses on trademark and copyright clearance, prosecution, and enforcement, as well as complex litigation, with an emphasis on intellectual property and commercial litigation. Sabrina represents clients in domestic and international trademark clearance, prosecution, and enforcement, including in proceedings before the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board and federal court. She litigates trademark infringement claims, state unfair competition, deceptive trade practices, trade secret, and false advertising claims in both business-to-business and consumer cases, consumer and privacy class actions, and other complex commercial actions. She represents clients in a diverse range of industries, including fashion, food, and consumer goods, technology, pharmaceutical, and medical device companies, retailers, wineries, and museums.

Sabrina maintains an active pro bono practice. She has successfully obtained asylum for clients from different countries, litigated civil rights cases in federal court, and obtained settlements for clients facing eviction.

Prior to joining Coblentz, Sabrina was an associate at Morrison & Foerster LLP in San Francisco. Before attending law school, Sabrina was an editor of anatomy and physiology textbooks for Pearson Education.

Sabrina is a member of the International Trademark Association's Trademark Reporter Committee.

Sabrina earned her J.D. from the University of California, Los Angeles School of Law, where she served as a senior editor of the UCLA Law Review, a research assistant for International Human Rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and was elected to the Order of the Coif. She received her B.A. summa cum laude in English from Carleton College, where she was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.
